Context (what is important to note about the creator, when it was created, its audience, or its format?): _____

Their format is to inform the audience of the problem in Flint water and understand all the parts that took place in the water poisoning and the people's experience being exposed to poisoning water.

Summary (what important facts about the source's content should we note for our discussion): The city's history and debt that's the background of why they had to change water source. The fact that if it wasn't for the doctor that found high levels of lead in children over short amount of time go up. From that moment they started to take action and realized that it was true and people were sick and tired of not having clean water.

Analysis (what should we take away to better understand our problem and its stakeholders?): _____

The fact that people weren't told about lead in the water, even though they were careful about the water because it was coming out dirty. If the people knew from the beginning it would prevent them getting sick so the problem could be approached a different way without people suffering the consequences of the city's government. Another problem that affected the people was that the people who were in charge of keeping up with water conditions didn't inform the people or make it concerning to the public. We need to make the problem known as fast as we can the lower the level of people exposed the problem even more if it has to do with their health.
